

Testing English in a Bilingual Programme

Client: Comunidad de Madrid

Country: Spain

In an agreement with the Comunidad de Madrid, Spain, Cambridge English Language Assessment qualifications are being used to assess student progress through the region's bilingual education programme.

In order to raise levels of English in state schools across the region, the Comunidad de Madrid implements a bilingual education programme based on a CLIL approach (Content and Language Integrated Learning), where up to 50% of the curriculum is taught in English. When first launched in 2004, 26 schools took part, but now 400 schools – 300 primary and 100 secondary – implement the programme. The Comunidad sets a standard target of Level B1 on the Common European Framework of Reference (CEFR) for pupils leaving primary school, with those achieving this level going on to a 'bilingual section' at secondary school, where 50% of classroom teaching is in English. Students below B1 level continue to receive a bilingual education, but for around 30% of lessons.

To manage this process, the Comunidad required a test which could benchmark the English ability of students leaving primary school against the CEFR, and therefore signed an agreement with Cambridge English Language Assessment to provide the exit tests required. As a result, in 2010, Cambridge English: Key (KET) for Schools was taken by over 1,400 pupils, in 40 schools, with Cambridge English: Preliminary (PET) taken by a further 160 pupils.

As the Comunidad also sets CEFR Level B2/C1 as the target for students leaving secondary school, Cambridge English: First (FCE) for Schools is being used to assess pupils in the second and fourth years of secondary education, thereby measuring English fluency before students take the Bachillerato (the Spanish Baccalaureate).

The use of Cambridge qualifications within the bilingual programme has prompted significant teacher training for the schools involved, and widespread changes to school curricula in order to absorb the new English content required. Such has been the success of the agreement, however, that the numbers of students tested continues to expand every year.

Around 18,000 candidates took Cambridge English: Key for Schools, Cambridge English: Preliminary, and Cambridge English: First for Schools in 2014.
